

Researcher Connect – Armenia Course Trainers

Dr Olanrewaju Olaoye (a.k.a. Larry) is a passionate trainer/facilitator who employs a learner-centred training philosophy for the workshops he facilitates to involve participants in their own learning. Having acquired postgraduate degrees from UK Higher Education Institutions (HEI's) up to PhD level while employing the Vitae Researcher Development Framework during his PhD research which explored the governance systems in London and Lagos, Dr Olaoye has developed a range of collaborative skills linked to research, curriculum review, module development and programme development from Level 4 (Foundation degree) to Level 8 (PhD) within the last 18 years of working at UK HEI's such as the University of York, Queen Mary University of London, and the University of Lincoln. He has worked in the private, public and third sectors hence, he understands the complex nature of organisational cultures and structures. He has also led British Council funded projects in Africa, Central Asia, and Americas.

Dr Rachel Brazil is an experienced trainer and freelance science writer based in London. From 2006 – 2010 she created and ran a national researcher development programme for the UK innovation agency, NESTA (National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts). Rachel has been involved with Researcher Connect since its inception in 2013 and has delivered the programme in China, Egypt, Russia, Ukraine and Mexico, as well as online since 2021, to countries including France, Indonesia, Bangladesh and Morocco. For over a decade she has written for research-focused publications such as Nature, covering science and higher education policy and brings the lessons she has learnt to Researcher Connect.
